

SLE TRAINING

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

SLE TRAINING is an international training programme for professionals in development cooperation. We see international cooperation as a global responsibility and therefore train international experts from the “South and East – West and North”. By bringing participants from various cultural backgrounds and with different professions together, SLE TRAINING pursues an intercultural and interdisciplinary approach. We consider mutual understanding and learning from one another an important prerequisite for successful cooperation in the field of international cooperation.

As part of the Humboldt-University, SLE TRAINING combines first-class scientific standards with experience-driven practical approaches. Besides being a provider of capacity development, we consider ourselves as part of an international network consisting of the growing number of our international alumni.

Since 2005 we have welcomed more than 750 participants from 118 different countries.

TRAINING PHILOSOPHY

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) provide the basis for development strategies until 2030. Practitioners, development organisations, the private sector, public administrations or science institutions require expertise as well as suitable strategies and instruments, in order to take effective steps at all levels (international, national, regional, local) and in all dimensions (social, economic, political-institutional, and environmental).

SLE TRAINING offers a combination of thematic and method-based training courses targeting the interface between science and practice. Since 2005, our renowned short-term training courses in Berlin provide high quality application-oriented and experience-based training, introduce practical methods and tools, support approaches and reflections within the processes of cooperation.

SLE TRAINING courses promote learning through experience: ‘Learning by doing’ is the most important aspect of our training philosophy. Case studies, teamwork, presentations, discussions and role plays create a learning environment in which participants bring in their own experience and link it to new topics and approaches.

TARGET GROUP

SLE TRAINING targets professionals in development cooperation, in public administrative bodies and institutions, in the academic field, in NGOs or in the private business sector as well as students and graduates with experience in international cooperation.

A good command of English is a prerequisite.

TRAINING COURSES IN BERLIN 2018

All courses are accompanied by discussions with guest lecturers and/or visits to organisations. This allows participants to become familiar with current discussions in course-relevant areas of international cooperation and to meet representatives of scientific institutions, governmental and non-governmental organisations as well as from the private sector.

The training courses take place at the Centre for Rural Development (SLE), Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin. Course hours are 9.00 am until 5.00 pm from Monday to Friday unless otherwise noted.
